FIZZLING SPEECH SHOWS VALUE OF WATER POWER

Water-Inspired Eloquence of Hon. N. W. Howell Flabbergasts Opponents to Temperance Policy.

In the days when the Rev. N. W. Howell was leader of the Liberal party in Ontario and was campaigning in the interests of his newly-announced temperance policy it is said that he ran into one rural constituency where that policy had not been adopted with the full favor of all who met to hear him.

The hall in which his meeting was being held contained a large audience, the speaker, and the difficulties were multiplied, not least because of the unusually large crowd. Several brands of tobacco and pipes were in use. The air was dense and some were inclined to complain of the unpleasant features of heckling, but with little success.

The speaker had his audience well in hand, but frequently he paused, as political speakers often do, to take a glass of water. His arguments were undoubtedly carrying weight and the crowd was swinging his way when for the nth time he stopped to take a drink from the speaker's table. A burly Irishman from the back of the hall, who had had previously taken flatly to Mr. Howell, was at the first time to see a great display of "water power!" When the laudatory bated the eloquent orator went on more convincingly than before.

AFFECTION, LOYALTY IN A PREMIER'S LIFE

New Book Features Human Qualities in the Life of Canada's New Prime Minister.

THIS kindly, human qualities of the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, deeply touched by his wife, help to make even the most ardent critics of his policies and actions an estimate of the premier's romantic rise to power.

At the foundation of Mr. King's success is a quiet but tremendous power of work. "Not only is he kind, considerate, and tactful," but, according to officials, newspapermen and political friends and foes, he is considered one of the most tireless workers who ever crept into office.

According to Mr. King himself it was the splendid affection of his parents to whom he attributed the inspiration that led him to write his chapter on "Family Affection," the second of a series of articles written to his parents graves on the eve of his election.

"The visit home to Ottawa from North York in the summer of 1919, which had been arranged for a day in spite of the famous telegraphed order of Mayor Mylan directing the police to treat 'this group of racial hyenas' as though they were bandits, had been the turning point. Mr. Maywood has opened public headquarters for the organization of the Klan in the Hotel Hermitage,

The visit of the Klan to his parents' graveside might have never led to all—he had met a friend home before going to his train. His wife, a wife of 20 years, told me that, remarking, "the mother who had not lived to see her son's success, she had, on the day following his victory, driven him home and leaves on many dead. There he stood in silent reverence, his shadow cast on the grass of their graves, while his wife died."

The "kindness of the father" is an indication of service in the Rebellion of '37.

"The visit of his hospital Users on Lemire, when he was a boy, made him a member of the Canadian Legion," he said.

On the following Sunday, in the "Nikitor News," the class organ of the Legion, there appeared the following poem:

Sir Wilfrid Laurier

Wilfrid Laurier Used to Ask Gifford Pinchot's Advice on International Problems.

The Veteran Commander of No. 7 Stationary Hospital Even Felt Himself Equal to Any Wind.

C. GLENN RAYMOND CASGRAIN, of Windsor, is pretty well known as a surgeon.

He has been president of the Ontario medical association, and practising on both sides of the Detroit river, but his record as a soldier is more striking. As far as your name in the military ranks has been present, by command of the Canadian forces. With No. 3 Hospital he served in the Mediterranean expeditionary force, with quarters for a long time, on the island of Lemire.

The doughty old colonel is noted, in addition, for freedom and scope of language, and it may be that he was not always polite to staff officers as he was to patients. "I'm not afraid of a brass hat," he said to his hospital Users on Lemire.

There wasn't much to criticize, but the distinguished visitor declared that the tent doors were fastened.

"It's a strong wind comes up, the tents will be blown down," he said.

"All right," said Col. Casgrain; "if they blow down we'll put them up the other way." And that was the end of that.

Only Advice

"BEEN standing here?" asked the mild-mannered man from the depths of his fur coat.

"Hours, sir," replied the beggar.

"Cold?"

"Frozen, sir," said the mendicant, with rifle pointed at him.

"Ah—said the millionaire, as he walked on.

Did What Nobody Had Done in Tokio Before

There Were no Precedents, So Hon. Mr. Justice MacLaren Just Went Ahead.

THE days when the Rev. N. W. Howell was leader of the Liberal party in Ontario and was campaigning in the interests of his newly-announced temperance policy it is said that he ran into one rural constituency where that policy had not been adopted with the full favor of all who met to hear him.

The hall in which his meeting was being held contained a large audience, the speaker, and the difficulties were multiplied, not least because of the unusually large crowd. Several brands of tobacco and pipes were in use. The air was dense and some were inclined to complain of the unpleasant features of heckling, but with little success.

The speaker had his audience well in hand, but frequently he paused, as political speakers often do, to take a glass of water. His arguments were undoubtedly carrying weight and the crowd was swinging his way when for the nth time he stopped to take a drink from the speaker's table. A burly Irishman from the back of the hall, who had had previously taken flatly to Mr. Howell, was at the first time to see a great display of "water power!" When the laudatory bated the eloquent orator went on more convincingly than before.

Mr. Justice MacLaren, who had one of the most commanding voices in the country, was a man of a moment's conviction. Everything must be done exactly right. Through the attendants and an interpreter he sought guidance as to "the courtesies of the post-war stump, then in the poor seasons at Monte Carlo, which he owns: then in one of the Paris banks and in the falling off of business at his mining factories, one of which he owns in the Yukon, and in the days when the French Foreign Legion in the Dardanelles Minor led to heavy losses there. Like every man of outstanding genius, the "millionaire of mystery," as he is called in Europe, cherishes his own personal biography. He hates women. The wealthiest man in Europe, possibly in all the world, at 67, he still remains a bachelor. It is a relative with whom he is seen walking in this exclusive photograph.

Mr. Justice MacLaren.

GIVING THE WHOLE WAY

Mr. Johnson, the former Progressive member of Moose Jaw, who was unseated for "irregularities" occurring during his campaign, wants the compulsory features of the wheat board legislation brought into effect, but would put the management of the board in the hands of the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company and the United Grain Growers. That is to say, the two companies would control the wheat crop of the prairie, and the wheat crop to be dealt with as they saw fit, compelling the farmers to sell to them and using the public credit to finance the gamble.

No doubt that would be a fine arrangement for the two companies concerned, but would be a case of heads the state soldiers would win; tails the country would have to make up the loss. And in any case the man who grew wheat would take what the companies saw fit to give him. There is nothing small about Mr. Johnson's proposal. He believes in doing the public proper. He is right. All he has done is to have produced some high grade samples of bare-faced monopolies, of one sort and another, but probably none that could take the blue ribbon away from this proposition. The farmer would supply the wheat; the public would supply the money; and the two companies would take the profit. If there were any bill and the public for the cost of that should be the way the speculation turned out.

THE WESTERN ROUTE

In response to letters sent out by the board of trade a number of the members of parliament and members of the provincial legislature have replied that they will support the movement to secure such elevator facilities at Vancouver as will make possible the handling of that part of the prairie crop that can be most profitably shipped westward. It might be assumed off-hand that there would be unanimous approval of that proposal on the part of all Alberta representatives at Ottawa, as well as by members of the local houses. During a good part of the past shipping season it seemed to all that by way of the Pacific coast to ship wheat from Edmonton to Los Angeles, but the Pacific grain companies did not let the United States, in the California port of San Francisco, get between them and the grain elevator route. Something over a million bushels of grain from this province went to the Pacific port before the close of the year, and more would have gone if it had been permitted. The lone elevator at Vancouver was crammed to the roof from early in the season, and to prevent the tying-up of box cars the railways had to go on an embargo against further westward shipments.

It has thus been demonstrated that the Pacific route is not merely a possible outlet for future use, but an outlet actually available at present if terminal facilities were provided to handle the grain that comes from the prairie cheaply than by the western route. The provision of these facilities is not a speculative project, but a proposal that gives every promise of paying from the moment the terminal plant is ready to handle a ripened crop. The western route has been brought down out of the realm of theory and guess-work, and its claims for recognition as a possible outlet for grain are now well established. Little property must be protected at all costs. It was necessary to do further damage at present. Secretary Peacock dares the authorities to put the other half of the mob along with those already locked up. He threatens that if they do so he will send further forces to pursue the same tactics. There is only one way to deal with such a situation. The Usual Treatment Does Not治 the Root of the Troubles

Approximately half of the total numbers are now in the hands of the police where they cannot do further damage at present. Secretary Peacock dares the authorities to put the other half of the mob along with those already locked up. He threatens that if they do so he will send further forces to pursue the same tactics. There is only one way to deal with such a situation. The Usual Treatment Does Not治 the Root of the Troubles

The bigger the crop the more they will lose if the Pacific route is not available; and it ususally happens that the bigger the crop the lower is the price and the more need that the farmer should get every cent out of his grain that he can get.

Building terminal elevators at Vancouver will not be sinking Dominion money or credit in an enterprise of doubtful advantage and uncertain financial results. So far as that is possible, both the advantages and the economic validity of the project are assured before the money has been spent. It is a question of whether the government to make a hazardous investment on the chance that something may get out of it; but of asking that the Alberta farmer be relieved of the handicap under which he is placed at present by having to ship his grain over the route that costs most for shipping charges and a route that always slows him down. Let us hope this late opening of the Atlantic can be got to the Atlantic.

From the Alberta stand-point the opening of the Western route is one of the most important questions before the country, and altogether the most important in connection with the marketing of the crop that makes the West the gold mine of Canada. The people are entitled to expect that Alberta representatives in parliament will give the project not only their nominal approval, but the most energetic support possible on the floor of the house.

ONE THING TO HIS CREDIT.

The official hangman of the Soviet has hanged himself. Evidently he was the best of the lot.

THE OMISSION.

Saskatoon taxpayers are rejoicing over an announcement that the tax rate is to be cut 15 mills. The item would be more informing if it said how many mills remain, which it thoughtfully doesn't.

WAITING TO SEE.

The conference at Lausanne has been waiting to see what would happen at the conference at Paris. In other words, the Turks have been marking time until they saw whether France or Britain was the dominating partner in the Allied combination.

INVITING TROUBLE.

A New York society woman was chloroformed and robbed of a half million dollar's worth of jewels and money. Of course it was wrong to do it, but a woman who takes that amount of wealth around on her person needn't wonder if the public refuse to put on mourning because she lost her toys. Such ostentation is in itself an incitement to crime.

THE YIELD DID IT.

More than 1,800 cars of grain passed through Calgary last fall, about twice the number of the busiest preceding shipping season. There has been no great increase in the grain production in recent years, and the figure suggests the exceptionally good crop that was gathered last season in the southern part of the province. The increase came from a larger yield, rather than from new land brought under crop.

NOT IN FRIENDLY MOOD.

The Greek Generalissimo says he is going to the front with an olive branch in one hand and a sword in the other. That may be the appropriate equipment, but if he expects to have any serious dealings with the Turks it might be better to discard the shrubbery and carry an automatic rifle. If the country is to be won over to the side of the Allies, the reason the chances are that he will not be more disposed to treat fairly with the Greeks, even if he is still at war, and whom he believes can beat all around the ring.

VALUES STATIONERY.

The assessment of real property is said, will be on the same basis this year as last, though two and a half million dollars' worth has been dropped from the roll. That of course is not the whole story. The mill-rate is yet to be struck, and the court would there play havoc with the pocket of the taxpayer as badly as an increase in the valuation of his property. The amount of property on which taxes are levied, it will be rather a wonder if the rate is not somewhat heavier than last year. That the assessment has not been increased is not surprising, for there has been no advance in actual values such as would justify marking up values for taxation purposes.

A DECLARATION OF WAR.

The U.M.W.A. through its secretary Robert Peacock, in his message from Calgary of January 4th, has declared war upon industry and constituted authority. There is no question of wages of miners or working conditions. The U.M.W.A. set out to close the port of Vancouver in order to ship to Los Angeles, but by way of the railroads to ship it by the grain elevator route. Sandspit overcame the determination to succeed. The Herring massacre, condemned by constituted authority, was what won the strike of 1922. Quite clearly the U.M.W.A. firmly believe that like tactics will produce like results in Canada—and that the efforts of authorities of Canadian labor to gain a portion of the rights of workers in the United States. In the California port of San Fran, Jan. 4th Robert Peacock, representing John L. Lewis, head of the U.M.W.A. boldly throws down the challenge to law and constituted authority in Canada. There is no alternative to taking it up as boldly and proudly as it has been taken up. A great many of our citizens of Canada, have kept the coal industry of the Edmonton field in a condition of disturbance for the past six weeks. They have committed numerous crimes of violence, destroyed property and have been guilty of acts of destruction of property. That they have not already committed murder is due to accident, not design. Their activities have cost the coal industry and therefore the people at large, over a quarter of a million dollars a day.

Approximately half of the total numbers are now in the hands of the police where they cannot do further damage at present. Secretary Peacock dares the authorities to put the other half of the mob along with those already locked up. He threatens that if they do so he will send further forces to pursue the same tactics. There is only one way to deal with such a situation. The Usual Treatment Does Not治 the Root of the Troubles

The Usual Treatment Does Not治 the Root of the Troubles

For they proceeded immediately to make a great deal of trouble for a time, but it always came back. A friend recommended that I make a little exercise in thinking over the mile or the drama immediately after the first few days of trouble. This is done, and as long as the blood is kept flowing, the trouble will not come back again. This is done, and as long as the blood is kept flowing, the trouble will not come back again.

This of course involves hard work, and a great many people, but those who are not afraid of hard work will find that medicine dealer by mail at 25 cents a dose, and a bottle of liniment, will be a great service to them. You can get these pills from the Dr. Williams Medicine

WHAT PRESS AGENTS SAY

JACK COOGAN AT ALLEN AS OLIVER TWIST

Youthful Star Has Even Better
Vehicle Than "Trouble"

Alexis B. Luce, Jane Aubrey and Metropolitan Players Have Good Play

A play that will appeal to all thinking people, but which at the same time develops sufficient comedy to reflect audiences' taste. "The Spendthrift" will be well received.

It was in this disreputable quarter of London that Oliver Twist was born, and that is where he still lives. The place still exists, though much of the wickedness rampant there in Dickens' day has been cleaned out. But the landmarks remain, and the scenes of Oliver's early work, familiar too, with the illustrations done by Cruikshank, the great artist of the period. The readers may find them and identify them in the shade of doubt. These will be shown. But they were in Dickens' day and described in the production scene to be offered here.

A peculiarity of these evil sections of London is that the husband is always the chief culprit. Therefore she embarks on a campaign of wife-spending—strenuous efforts, moreover, to do so.

The story of "The Spendthrift" is the tale of the financial and economic difficulties of the Ward family, who are living in New York City. The wife is a spendthrift, always ahead of the husband's income. The wife begins to suspect that the husband is a spendthrift, too, and takes it for granted that he is. She begins to suspect him.

There is the contrast of Ward's brother, who takes a solemn "no" attitude toward his wife's ways. He is experienced in business and is struggling along on mere effort, to do well in a world where the odds are against him.

The readers of Dickens will find everything in his memory concerning "Oliver Twist" suddenly illuminated and clarified again in this fine National attraction.

offer to go west and grow up with the man, but are disposed of by their financial obligations, so that they may leave town, his wife becoming a wealthy clubwoman, who has devoted her life to the study of womanizing and who is the epitome of being a "wrester." Naturally, one can't help laughing through this thoughts, and one can't help laughing at the lawyer friend of the husband, who tries to prevent the wrecking of a prosperous business by his wife's extravagance. He gains only the undying hate of a womanizer, and a brief synopsis it is impossible to give. The bright lights of a play such as "The Spendthrift" are few, but the general lesson is that there is little happiness in a childless home, for without children there is nothing to hold together the four walls of any home, even much discontent.

JACKIE DAW IN MIDGETVILLE

Drawings by Leslie Elton Story by Hal Cochran

Jack followed the midgets to a large hall. "This is the Midgetville Auditorium," one of the little men explained. "This is where we will dress." "But I can't get in there," replied Jack. "My mother never does." "Wait a minute," said one of the midgets. "I'll go and see if we can't remove the roof of the hall and set outside the building to eat."

"That is a very good idea," said Jack. "I'll not do any damage to your auditorium because I can replace the room when we are through." Then he took a good grip on the roof and pulled it free of its supports. A great noise inside the hall greeted him. Large boxes were filled with food.

White little midgets were out in front of the band of tiny folks seated themselves at the tables. Jack laughed to watch them scramble. Then he sat down on the ground and prepared to eat at all the same time. The meal began his success and it lasted many hours.
